It's Part of Democracy

is the lack of faith adults show in the natural intelligence of the young. Students should have free accessparticularly when they pay for it themselves to see and hear such professional stirrer-uppers as Mr. Jerry Rubin or Mr. Mark Rudd, no matter how revolutionary their ideas may appear. The more extreme the viewpoint, the more likely it is to arouse only a healthy scepticism-Little can be gained by attempting to quarantine such persons; especially by manipulating immigration regulations, as has been urged, in order to keep out foreigners who are legally entitled to enter the country. Exposure to such influences is often the best antidote.

Admittedly, these rhetorical fermenting agents present a dilemma for the democratic citizen. Although some of the ideas expounded may be logical but unpalatable, others wildly impracticable, and still others downright destructive, he would be treading on very dangerous ground to deny them a hearing-if an audience can be persuaded to attend. At what point does one include in "bad" ideas those one just does not like?

To 'Ell in a 'Ack, Not by Jet

FUNANCE Minister Benson has suffered Trudeau's pocket, and the ministers want a 'eart transplant without sheddin' some criticism in Parliament but he cover their mouths with adhesive tape at a drop of blood in the operatin' room. will be happy to learn that his recent budget is warmly approved by as wise an observer as my friend, Mrs. Alfred

The way I read it," she said, "Benson solemnly guaranteed to balance the budget before the June election but 'ow could 'e do it when 'e didn't collect enough taxes? Don't blame 'im. Blame the stingy taxpayers. "Forchunately, by a strange accide the gover'mint never suspected that its accounts 'ad been entirely miscalculated until the election was safely won and the Liberals snug in office. There was no deception on the voters, as Stanfield tries to make out. It was jest a slight error in the computin' machines. The gover'mint's plans were flawless, says Benson. Only the figgers were wrong.

"Well, Benson 'as good news for all of us. The country is plungin' into the abyss of inflation but not quite so fast. The speed of ruin 'as slowed down by a ction of one per cent. We're still goin' to 'ell in a 'ack all right but we might be in a supersonic jet plane if we didn't 'ave a thrifty gover'mint that always travels economy class.

"Yes, sir, we should be thankful that the budget deficit wasn't worse. It's like Uncle 'Erbert when 'e lifted a thousand pounds from the bank in London and asked the court to find 'im innocent because 'e could just as easily 'ave taken a million.

Robbed the Poor

"Admittedly, says Benson, inflation 'as robbed the savings of the poor and weak but that's a small price to pay for a Just Society. Besides, the gover'm chosen to undertake a separation goin' to balance the next budget. We'll solve the desperate crisis, says Benson, but not prematurely. We'll rescue the drownin' economy but not till our task forces 'ave completed their swimmin' sons. The 'ouse is burnin' down but it would be dangerous to call the firemen before next spring. They might wet the ates with their 'oses in this cold autumn weather.

"Meanwhile the gover'mint 'as sw off deficits like 'Erbert swore off drink every morning of "is life and was always sober till moon. You could trust a man like that. You can trust the word of the national treasury, so long as you don't try to eash in one of its bonds at the sent bargain-basement prices,

"Never mind, we've got democratic participation at last. Let all Canadians participate in the nation's vital business, says Trudeau, and everybody is participatin' like crazy but nobody tells 'em wot they're participatin' about. The cabinet is locked up tight, with the key in his accession to power five years ago.

night in case they talk in their sleep. But there's got to be secrecy in cabinet decisions, especially when there's no decisions to "ide.

"Anyways, secret or not, we all participate joyfully by workin' a third of every day to pay our taxes, with no time to think of sordid politics. That's wot I call full participation and it suits Trudeau fine. Go 'ome, the gover'mint tells the people, and participate as much as you like but leave us alone to save the country from disaster after five glorious years of Liberal reform.

'It should be clearly understood, says Trudeau, that the former gover'm committed no blunders and its record was perfect. Oh, sure, they left me a us mess to clean up but that's purely coincidental, and if I've reversed the whole policy of my predecessors that's not to say they were wrong. It only means that Liberalism continually discovers glitterin' new aspects of truth.

'Uman After All

"Tm no god to perform miracles, says Trudeau, Unbellevable as it may look, I'm 'uman after all. Nucherally, no one believes such nonsense. Don't give us any of those weak excuses and false modesty, says the public. We know better. Get on with the miracle while we enjoy our participation for free.

"So, by and large, Canada 'as no . serious problems. Anyone who worries parts may elect 'im against 'is will when about the state of the nation is jest a 'e proposes to spend more money to cure rich reactionary, an enemy of the poor, or a member of the Trudeau cabinet. Every patriotic citizen demands the sacred privilege of payin' more taxes and no gover'mint can deny 'im 'is basic Wot a great and intelligent people demand is strong, tough, courageous said Mrs. Neggins, "and stop wastin' the policies if they don't 'urt anyone. They third of my workin' time that belongs to want deep surgery in the budget, the gover mint. See you later, you looky provided it don't puncture the skin. They old participator."

"But Stanfield, who can't understand the new economics, is astounded and flabbergasket. There's no satisfyin' that man. Why, says 'e, the gover'mint is axually followin' the same reckless policies as the last Conservative administration of 'allowed memory and wot could be worse than that? In fact, the Liberals 'ave made our own performance seem pretty good by comparison and that's Trudeau's real miraels

Things Are Looking Up

"Things are lookin' up for us, says Stanfield, and we see now where we went wrong. It was the famous Tory thinkers' conference that wrecked us. It was thinkin' that got us into all our troubles and you may be sure we'll never repeat that mistake.

"Diefenbaker is still thinkin" all the same but he keeps strictly silent except for a press conference in the morning and a speech or two in the afternoon 'e doesn't want to take the spotlight off 'is beloved leader. Personal loyalty can go no further.

"The man to watch, though, is Tommy Douglas whose only ambition is to retire. Out of unselfish devotion to is followers 'e's wanderin' through the dark jungles of Vancouver Island lookin' for a parliamentary seat and the suprer sacrifice that 'e's so eager to avoid. But the wild and savage natives of those 'e proposes to spend more money to cure inflation and promises that the NDP will reproduce in Canada all the marvels of socialism in Britain. No wonder the natives are friendly to Douglas. They'll gladly trade their votes for 'is shiny glass beads,

Neither Blind Nor Apathetic

I find that I must reply to your editorial concerning the poor turnout of voters for the October 26th hospital

This, my friend, I am quite sure is neither ignorance nor apathy. The large percentage of owner-electors are simply fed up for unless they are blind they can see that the situation is hopeless anyway. You yourself admitted, in your editorial of October 25," that the democratic process no longer exists. (Ed. note: Not quite!) This is borne out by your statement that should the referendum defeated it would have to be re-submitted at a later date in any event. This is very true as it was refused two years ago but after a time, back again, even if in a slightly different

A Few Questions

When is the government going to bring pressure to bear on the universities stration to do the job they are paid to do in the area of discipline and

When are the university authorities going to accept their responsibilities and exercise the authority they have? When are the student majorities, i.e. the normal hard-working, seriously thinking groups, going to indicate quite clearly to the trouble-makers that the majorities have had enough of this nonsense?

When are the minority groups going to recognise (a) that the public owes them nothing, in fact, quite the reverse? and (b) the imported paid professional trouble makers for what they are? viz professional parasites.

When are the publicity media, e.g., radio, TV and newspapers going to stop giving the limelight to the minority trouble makers, thereby indirectly en-couraging them? — Wondering.

Dropping "The Queen"

I have recently learned that "The Queen" is to be dropped at the symphony concerts in our City of Victoria (with the proviso "except when Her Majesty's representative is present"). Surely this cannot have been decided by a majority vote of any kind? One wonders if 'O Canada' might also have been in jeopardy? As a charter member of the Women's Committee to the Symphony Society I wish to publicly protest such a decision, and since ou symphony depends upon public support I trust my protest will be supported by all symphony-goers. — Kathleen M. turbulence will strengthen the conserva-tive elements in the administration, who see no reason to improve the lot of the Catholics. And even if this does not happen, there will be no straight road to reform. For instance, it is hard to see how Capt. O'Neill will unravel the tangle in Londonderry, recently the scene of a battle between police and demonstrators.

Londonderry has a Catholic majority, but the Protestant minority has traditionally been assured of control of the town council through several electoral gimmicks. Only property-owners can vote in the local elections, so the rities contrive to make sure that Catholics only receive houses in one of the town's three wards. The representation for that ward is never enough to outweigh the representation from the other two wards, in which the Protestant electorate is concentrated.

The reaction to any direct would likely strengthen the hand of the Protestant hard-liners to the disadvant-age of Capt. O'Neill and the would-be reformers. Prime Minister Harold Wilson may well content himself with discreet support for the Ulster moderates as against the conservatives. It is loaf, or even half. There would be nothing discreditable about grasping a modest morsel.

THERE ARE CONFLICTING REports on how much further delay there may be in the construction program for the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal project. But in pushing ahead with a project which has long enjoyed the support and intershould keep firmly in mind a matter of fundamental importance.

Because of a controversy involving the architects and government procedures, and also because of the closely competitive situation which forces builders to cut every feasible corner, there may be a disposition to create in the Blanshard housing area a type of accommodation which, while suitably moderate in cost for the tenants, could be visually unacceptable to the public on whose downtown doorstep the housing will stand.

This project will be adjacent to a main traffic thoroughfare, with all the prominence which that implies. There should be every effort, therefore, to ensure that it is attractive in appearance—both the individual houses and the planned layout as a est of the public, those in charge, whole. This appearance should be of a durable type-which means architectural features and landscaping should be of high quality as well as surface finishes.

There should be assurance that the district will look as attractive a few years hence as when the building program is completed - which will require an imaginative, forwardlooking approach by those who draw the plans and an equally enlightened view by those whose responsibility it is to accept them. We have got rid of a relatively run-down district. Let us not sow the seeds of another one.

"YOU BETTER BURN THIS! I THINK I JUST GAVE MRS TAYLOR A NERVOUS BREAK-UP!"

DISTEMPER OF OUR TIMES Part Four

By PETER C. NEWMAN

Just as Walter Gordon epitomized what was fresh and different in the Pearson regime from the King-St. Laurent era. Jack Pickersgill stood for everything that was the same.

He interpreted each new suggestion not in terms of its future potential but merely by how it tallied with the past.

He judged policy initiatives on the basis of their administrative acceptability and regarded all reforms with suspicion.

John Whitney Pickersgill's approach to government was so uniquely his own that his name found a place in Canada's political dictionary. The expression "Pickersgillian" came to signify any partisan ploy that was too clever by half.

His strong peronality, encyclopaedic knowledge of Ottawa and its ways, his mastery of Commons rules and intense loyalty to Lester Pearson allowed him to exercise a decisive and not always benign leverage on the course of federal

But his violent partisanship, dated view of Canadian society and erratic political judgment made him a doubtful society, and errane pouroal judgment made min a doubturn asset to the hard-pressed government.

"Jack is so firmly hooked on the past that I sometimes think he's wearing cement boots," commented one of his colleagues. Another minister swore that rare indeed were the meetings of the Pearson Cabinet during which Pickersgill failed to mention the way Mackenzie King used to solve the crises of his day.

Pickersgill readily billowed forth irrelevant historical data (such as the fact that John Bracken's Manitoba cabinet of 1922 was composed entirely of Presbyterians) but had little feeling for contemporary events.

Part of Pickersgill's problem was that he really had no contact with modern Canada. He had grown up on a Manitoba farm, attended university and then, except for summer holidays on the coast of northern Newfoundland, had spent the rest of his life entirely in Ottawa.

"Metropolitan urban society is just outside my human experience. What the great majority of Canadians regard as a normal environment has not been my environment and this undoubtedly colours my outlook," he once admitted.

What allowed Pickersgill to prosper so long at such high levels of influence within the Ottawa hierarchy was his uncanny ability to manipulate the gears of bureaucratic control. His thirty years within the Ottawa power structure had taught him all the tricks both of how political control of the civil service could be exercised and of how bureaucratic methods could be used to drain the will of the politicians. methods could be used to drain the will of the politicians. He had the habit of power and knew the mechanics of the game.

Jack Pickersgill's unusual career spanned four political eras and left a deep imprint on each. Between 1937 and 1948 be had functioned as Mackenzie King's chief adviser and it was during this epoch that the phrase "clear it with Jack" was during this epoch that the phrase "cleafirst became a password to power in Ottawa.

He was an even more important arbiter of influence during the administration of Louis St. Laurent and he emerged, full-blown, in 1953 as a cabinet minister and MP for Bonavista-Twillingate, where he was irreverently known as "Sailor Jack" because he visited the outports aboard his own

His next guise was as one of the most effective Liberal Opposition frontbenchers during the Diefenbaker Years. After the Liberals regained office in 1963, Pickersgill emerged once again as a prime ministerial confidant.

Near the close of the Pearson period, when he could sense the draining away of his political power, Pickersgill smoothly slid into a self-created job as head of the Canadian

It may not have been exactly a noble career but it was, well, cohesive.

'The Government Party'

Like Mackenzie King, Jack Pickersgill could not see much scope for public service away from power. Probably more than any other Liberal he considered his party not so much an organ of the people as an organ of the state and in private would often refer to the Liberals as "the government

His career and opinions made him the incarnation of the Ottawa Liberal Establishment. He acted as though he really believed that, by accepting the burdens of office, the Liberals were bestowing a benefaction on the nation at large and that any criticism of Liberalism was an impatriotic activity.

Just before the 1957 election, Pickersgill declared with a straight face: "It is not merely for the well-being of Canadians but for the good of mankind in general that the present Liberal government should remain in office." His party affiliation seemed so close to a religion that one wondered whether faith alone and not reason informed him.

Questioned by a reporter about the characteristics of Liberal prime ministers, he replied: "They never, any one of them ever told a conscious lie or allowed anything that was calculated to give a false impression. Mackenzie King, for instance, was meticulous to the point of being tiresome about it, putting in all sorts of qualifications so that nobody in any conceivable circumstance could ever show that there was anything about his statements that was untrue."

If the Liberals were lily white in the Pickersgillian lexicon, the Tories were jet back. "The real trouble with the Conservative Party." he once said, "is that basically it has been a party of Anglo-Saxon racists. They really don't believe in the equality of all Canadians.

"They really don't believe the French have any right in this country, unless they act like a conquered people." On another occasion he remarked that Conservative governments are "like having the mumps-something you have to endure once in your lifetime, but when it's over you don't ever want it again,"

Jack Pickersgill (with Guy Favreau and John Nicholson)

Though Pickersgill's influence was exercised in the hush of his office and the privacy of the cabinet chamber, he was

His penguin shape was constantly bobbing up and down during the excitement of debates. Physically clumsy, he was utterly incapable of sitting still. When he was a youngster, his grandmother had made him a standing offer of five cents for every five minutes he could keep quiet. "I needed the money badly, but I never earned a penny of it," he recalled. Because Pickersgill performed so effectively between 1957 and 1963 when the Liberals were in Opposition, his best known for the displays he put on in the House of authority within the Pearson retinue continued to expand and when the Liberals moved back into power he was named to the key post of House Leader.

One of the few ministers Pearson's secretaries would unhesitatingly put right through to the PM any time he called, he was a key influence throughout the Pearson period particularly after Walter Gordon (following Pickersgill's whispered advice) proved so inept in defending his first Pickersgill was able to create a parliamentary majority for the Liberals by his continuous negotiations with the Social Crediters. He also steered through the House the controversial constituency redistribution bill and plotted the Liberals' defensive strategy during the scandals debates.

Colorless and Neutral

Pickersgill extended his power by adopting Guy Favreau as a kind of political protege. It was Pickersgill who persuaded Favreau to bring Leo Cadieux and Jean-Pierre Cote into the cabinet, mainy because they were colorless politically neutral French Canadians who would cause no trouble but would back the Pickersgill-Favreau axis.

In the winter of 1964, Pickersgill recommended to Pearson that Guy Favreau succeed him as House Leader because it would enhance his prestige when he because Quebec lieutenant. This was a disastrous appointment, for both Favreau and the Liberals, but despite these and other errors in judgment the Prime Minister continued to heed

Part of the reason may have been that to Pearson, Pickersgill represented those happy placid days when the government had been really in charge of Parliament and Parliament seemed in control of the country.

Surely this man who had advised Mackenzie King and Louis St. Laurent in the delicate art of keeping the political lid on could do the same for him. The trouble was that while Pickersgill remained the same, the country in which he was operating has altered.

In terms of the federal administration this meant the y, sometimes agonizing passage from the old, interest-ded, elite-conducted approach to government (which had ed a Pickersgill to thrive) to a new and very different kind of politics.

Mild welfare plans, tailored to keep the voting public at bay, were no longer effective. Issues and challenges became more sophisticated, far less amenable to the old calculus of behind-the-scenes deals conducted by a self-selected hier-archy, of which Jack, Pickersgill had been the most experienced member.

His world was vanishing, but Pickersgill was ahrewd enough to recognize it and proceeded to plan himself a new career. In the summer of 1967 Pickersgill as the Minister of Transport was busy piloting through the Commons the National Transportation Act, designed to rationalize Canada's obsolete railway system. Few MPs noticed that the presidency of the new Canadian Transport Odmmission set up to the rest of the presidency of the new Canadian Transport Odmmission set up the legislation was made particularly attractive. The annual salary was set at $40,000 a year and the retirement age (Pickersgill was then sixty-two) was not the usual sixty-five, but seventy. The position was never advertised by the Civil Service Commission, Having written himself a job description, Pickersgill on September 5 resigned from Cabinet and recommended himself for the opening.

Pearson accepted and "Sailor Jack" launched himself on his fifth Otiawa incarnation, showing no qualms whatsoever about having left the public service, staying 14 years in politics and now re-entering a bureaucracy which in theory and practice, ought to be non-partisan.

The circumstances that allowed Jack Pickersgill to flourish were part of a cynical old-style approach to politics in Canada. But even in that context he was one of a kind.

What didn't happen, quite simply, was something that has occurred in every other major Western country this year-a truly violent confrontation between angry students and sadistic police. Here, even the official Communist newspaper published a Page 1 story describing police be-havior during the demonstration as being in general "exemplary."

The word was used by Tony Smythe, general secretary of nal Council for Civil Liberties, and his judgment was duly reported in the Morning Star.

No Visible Arms

It is worth searching for an explanation for the non-confrontation on Grosvenor Square. The reflections that follow are based upon my own observation during the demonstration weekend: five points seem worth making: • The most obvious, and yet the one that most needs stressing, is that the visible tokens of violence are in themselves an inducement to it. Every American who fol-lowed the march could not fail to be impressed by the total absence of visible police weapons-there were nightsticks, no truncheons, no revolvers, or at least none that could be seen.

Pervasive Effect

had a subtle yet pervasive effect on the temper of the marchers and on the tactics of the militants who frontally charged the police line around Grosvenor Square.

The absence of solemnity and self-righteousness among the police made it harder for demonstrators to themselves with the ed to lack the deep sense grievance found American youngsters who face being drafted or fear being swallowed up in an impersonal society dominated by corporate bureaucracies.

Nor was there the feeling, so prevalent in France lost May, that higher education was being abysmally mismanaged. Walking among the demonstrators, one felt that the atmosphere was closer to a pierie them a revolution, and a picnic than a revolution, and that the youngsters were literally more interested in making love than war.

Outlet For Protest

 British mass media has of protest to a degree unknown in France and hardly approached in the United States. Though television here States. ### Not Constitution

• The experience of Sunday reinforces the view that civil liberties rest ultimately on a national determination to protect them—and not on a written constitution or bill of rights. It is striking that both America and Russia have constitutions that expressly guarantee the right to dissent.

In practice, both countries, differing degrees, have much to learn from Britain. No doubt this could change. The Vietnam demonstration last March was far more violent that its overadvertised mement, British experience in building a non-violent, relatively gentle society seems of paramount importance to a sworld beset by police brutality and student nihflism.

It is remarkable that such fragile-looking creatures can travel such great distances, many thousands of miles, using nothing more than using nothing more than flower nectar for food.

The migration route and certain details of their life history have been determined by direct observation. Butter-fly-watchers at several points have noted the regular pas-sage of the fliers and plotted their progress along some sections at centaln seasons of the year and the habit of spending the winter in the Monterey area of California is

Some of the conclusions. regarding migration have been verified by a series of studies made over the last 30 years by a group of workers in various parts of Canada under the direction of Dr. F. A. Urquhart, formerly of the

But only a narrow band of water around the rim of continents receives the discharge oceanographer Michael Waldichuk said Wednesday night.

And it tends to become polluted becau and tidal ebb and flow keep I unchanged.

"The truth of the matter that we will never be able to mix the waste throughout the oceans," he told an audience of about two dozen in the third of a series of seven lecture dealing with the local sewage and garbage disposal problem

MOST SUSCEPTIBLE

Giant oceanic currents could safc' carry sewage away but these have little effect on B.C.'s coastal waters, he said.

Inshore estuaries are most susceptible and some are already "grossly polluted."

Dr. Waldichuk, who is ir eharge of the fisheries research laboratory at Nanaimo, said the most favorable ocean conditifor dispersing sewage outfall are in tide-swept channels like Seymour Narrows near Camp

KEPT STAGNANT

In Juan de Fuca Strait the water mixes but in Saamich "sill" on the ocean bottom keeps the water starnant and it could swiftly become polluted.

Tides do not flush Portage Inlet waters and they are als highly susceptible to pollution he said.

Aerial photographs showed how onshore winds blow polluted waters to the beach from the outfall off Clover Point.

Ocean disposal of sewage thinks will some day be discon tinued, said Dr. Waldichuk.

TREMENDOUS COST

The cost of restoring an area once it has been heavily polluted is tremendous, he added.

During a question period he was asked how far pollute traced. It reaches Active Past and there are indications it gets right into Saanich Inlet who the river is in freshet, he said.

Vancouver or retire," said the Separadi veteran who accred 20 goals and 39 assists for the Penguins.

His attachment to Vancouver started 16 years ago.

After leading the Goelph, Ont., junior Biltmores to a rational championship in 1852, the New York Rangers sont him to their Vancouver farm club.

He spent only a part of the season in Vancouver and was soon carving an enviable record into the NEL books with two all-star selections, the most valuable player award in 1998 and a 40-goal

But during his tenure in Vancouver, Bathgute devel-opiel a special interest in the coast. He likes to fish and golf (he shoots in the 70s.)

When Canucks learned Bathgate wanted to play on the coast, they welcomed him with open arms.

He took a "healthy cut" in unges but Vancturer is his wite's hometown and his two little girls are "getting to know their grandparents." He plans to make Van-

By STEVE HUME

The University of Victoria's stride into the big time collegiate athletics didn't come free, Participation by Uvic teams in the Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association will cost the students' extra-mural athletic council $14,000 this year.

And the Alma Mater Society's extra-mural representative, Al Foster, reports that with only partial involvement in the inter-varsity schedule this year, students can expect costs to soar even higher during the 1969-1970 program.

Next season, for example, men's varsity busketball and hockey alone will cost an expected total of $12,500, most of it to be gobbled up by road trips across the Rocky Mountains to prairie universities, Foster said.

Hockey, he predicted, will cost $7,500, while basketball should grab a further $5,000.

The expense isn't limited just to men, the women's varsity basketball team will cost $2,000 this season while playing a full schedule in the women's end of the WCIAA.

"We're expecting our total budget for next year to be up around $80,000." Poster said.

This year's budget, supporting all inter-varsity and extramural achieties, is a whopping $54,801 already.

Of the sum, students pay only $17,000 through the Alma Mater Solety grant, Foster said.

Another $22,000 is granted by the university administration, who also pick up the $11,300 cost of running the athletic directorate's administrative organization.

Foster said his figure of $69,000 was an over-estimate just to be on the safe side, and he said he is already taking steps to alim next year's badget. One move by the council could be to hand over payment of all salaries and honovaria to the administration in order to place more emphasis to sports clubs on campus, said Foster.

"Some of our clubs do compete in extra-curricular sports and they've kind of been ignored previously. What we'll try to do is involve them into our program as third rank participants."

"Two of the slubs have actually been entered in WCIAA competition this season, and the men's and women's curling teams will travel out of town."

"The ski club and judo club are two more examples of clubs that are largely mira-mural but which also compete outside the university," the extra-mural director said.

He said the extra-mural body will attempt to increase revenues next year by calling for a student referendum and asking for the right to collect $5 for each student paying AMS

Meanwhile, Uvic teams will see lots of action at weekend, but only some of it will involve the WCIAA.

The girls' track team will participate in the first half of a telegraphic meet with the University of Saskatchewan in WCIAA action Saturday. Second half of the meet goes a week comparing times—places and points are awarded on that basis.

Three soccer teams see competition at the weekend, but only two will play at home.

The senior varsity Vikings travel to Seattle for exhibition intercollegiate action against Seattle University and the University of Washington Friday and Saturday.

The soccer Vikings, reigning WCIAA champions, knocked off the best in the west of college soccer two weeks ago, and coaches expect little opposition from the American teams.

At home, the Norsemen meet the powerful Wests of the Victoria and District second division in a Sunday game at Uvic. Saturday the junior varsity team meets the British Columbia Institute of Technology in junior intercollegiate league play at Uvic.

league play at Uvic.

All three rugby teams will also play at the weekend.

The Vikings, tied for first place in the Victoria Rugby Union first division, meet Vancouver Trojans in an exhibition match Saturday at Gordon Head Junior Secondary School.

The Norsemen tackle James Bay Athletic Association's Barbarians in second division play at Macdonald Park, and the junior varsity Saxons tangle with UEC frosh in B.C. Junior Intercollegiate Rugby League play at Uvic.

In field hockey, the Uvic Vandals, who shot down Victoria

Red Barons in district play last week, will hunt Victoria Tigers at Gordon Head Sunday.

Saturday brings distaff field hockey play, with both Uvic women's teams clashing on the university pitch.

CLEVELAND, Ohio-Republican candidate Richard M. Nixon challenged Vice - President Hubert H. Humphrey in a nation-wide address Wednesday night to join in in awarding the presidency to the winner of the popular vote plurality in next Tuesday's election.

Nixon, who has predicted that he will win that plurality by at least 3 million to 5 million votes, described himself as "ready right new to abide by the decision of the American

Nixon said that Humphrey "hopes for a three-way split to divide and conquer . . . a constitutional crisis to wheel and deal his way to power."

The vice-president has previously declined to enter into a plurality-vote compact with Nixon, saying he would abide by the constitutional processes requiring a majority of votes in the electoral college, or, failing that, a majority of state delegations in the House of Representatives.

Wednesday night, however, Nixon described his opponent's willingness to accept the proposal as a test of Humphrey's commitment to "the American system of government", and claimed that a Humphrey turn-down would prove "the depth of his down wood desperation".

Nixon's dare, which was broadcast as he completed his final campaign swing through the midwest, was con-sidered a perfectly safe one by his

They, along with Nixon, appear to be entirely confident of a popular vote plurality—as indicated by public opinion polls—but they are less certain of a majority of votes in the Electoral College or, should it come to that, a majority of the House delegations.

Learning How to Tackle the Dating Game

(Hillier's Note-This report on broader bay-girl relationship is galapted from the book. "A Girl's Guide to Builley and Guide Nicoley. The author is a well-degrees New Johnsy psycholiderspick and professor of New York.

Probably every girl who dates comes face to face with the question of the "line"—how to take it and how to hand it out. A "line" is an approach by a boy to a girl, or vice versa. The first person tells the other how attractive and desirable she (or he) is. The receiver of the "line" then faces the task of deciding how much is two and here they have much is two and here. deciding how much is true and how much is false.

As the game is often played, the boy who gives a girl a line that she falls for, to the extent that she does something the wants her to do, is the winner. On the other hand, the girl who lets the boy lease that she sees through his line without "arraing him off" may be said to be handling it well.

Your problem is to try to determine how much of this frattery is true and how much is intended to deceive. To put it another way, it is up to you to determine how much a boy really cares for you. If he sincerely feels that you are extra special, you may not want to discouring him. But if you suspect that he is trying to snow you under with words he does not mean, you may want to make sure your feelings for him do not get out

The best test of whether a buy is telling something approximately like the truth is simply to subject him to the test of time. If he thinks that you are the answer to all his dreams, he would cerwant to date you often.

Should Girls Ask for Butes?

Twenty or more years ago, there was one answer to this question—a resounding to. Must people believed that hoys should always take the first step so that they could feel that they were choosing the girl. Probably, boys still want to be the pursuers, a 1 th ough there is much evidence that they do not seem to be as firm about it today as they seemed to be in

Dating Between "Colikes"

The ideal date for the young toon-age girl is usually a long she has known for some time, who lives in her community, who is about her age, and who has a similar background. The reason this is an ideal date is that, as I have pointed out, a girl's first dating experiences get 8 their caring experiences usually have enough built-in tensions without adding to them, as might be the case if she went out with a boy from a drastically different back-ground who perhaps had to face the objections of purents and relatives as well.

From the point of view of background, like usually aftracts like—because like and like have much in common. When like attracts unlike, questions are raised automatically. Since common interests do not seem to be involved, what is the attraction? What is he trying to get from her that he could not get from girls of his own age or background? What can she get from him that she cannot get from boys with backgrounds like her own? Is he trying to use her, or is she trying to use him? Special problems crop up in these kinds of situations be-tween "unlikes":

Bating Older Boys or Men. When an older male dates a much younger girl it may be because he has certain emotional meeds—a same of inferiority, for example—that cause him to doubt that he can get along well with a girl his out age. Or he may find that he can impress a young girl with presents and favors that might not impress older

"Pick-Up" - In the typical pick-up situation, girls are seen by boys on the street or in some other public place, a conversation is struck up, and conversation is struck up, and a date is arranged—to have a smack or soda together, attend a movie or ball game, take a ride in a car. The "pick-up" has several built-in hunards. The most important is that the girls idease nothing about the buys, their character, personality, or intentions. The personality, or intentions. The fact that the girls are willing to date in this offinand way often gives boys the idea that

String Inspires Temper Tantrum

By PENNY SAVER

I know that somewhere in our house there is an almost I know that somewhere in our house there is an almost unused ball of string. I know it is there somewhere; where is the question. This question arose when I needed a piece of string in the worst way. I was preparing a package for mailing and it was complete except for the string. I looked in the drawers, the cuptoards, the shelves — even in the refrigerator and under the beds, but couldn't find that ball of string. I convened the beaute from ion called the string. of string. I searched the house from jam cellar to attic; I ched the garage. I looked in the garden in case the string had been left out there when someone was stringing a trellis for the sweet peas or tying up tornato plants. Finally I looked in a store where I found, and bought, another ball. Yesterday I needed some string again and guess what — I couldn't find "Temper tantrum" is the best name I can give to the "Temper tantrum" is the best name I can give to the scene that followed. My family left to let me work out my string-less mood in peace and when they returned for supper they prudently came bearing a gift. A very useful gift it is too. They brought me a bag in which to keep string. This bag is made of burinp and decorated with a red rooster. It has a sturdy metal eyelet in the bottom through which the free end of the string is pulled. A pair of red-handled scissors comes with this bag and they hang from a square metal loop at the bottom of the bag. The bag hangs from the wall by a pair of similar metal loops attached to one side of the open top. This bag, which costs $1$, co-ordinates with a full set of kitchen accessories all bearing the red rooster motif. Most of the oessories all bearing the red rooster motif. Most of the sees I have seen are less than $2. Among the accessories in this set are cream and sugar, a vase, a spoon rest, a cutting board and a napkin holder.

Sealing Wax Puzzler For Child

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "to talk of many things. Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings." A very famous phrase, that one, but for one young friend of mine quite confusing. She could handle the nonsense perfectly well, but she didn't know what "sealing wax" was! Her mother and I tried to explain, but this child of modern technology couldn't comprehend an this chaid of modern technology couldn't comprehend in envelope without glue, so we decided to solve her quandary by buying her a package of sealing wax and a seal. A gift-packed package with four colors of perfumed sealing wax and a brass rose seal is $2.50. The colors of wax include purple, green, red and a clear amber-brown with flecks of metallic gold in it. These waxes have a wick which makes them easier to use. The same sealing wax is available for 35c a stick and included many more colors than those I have listed. Also available separately are initial seals for $1 each.

A week ago Times columnist, Arthur Mayse, described a game known as instant insanity. For those of you who missed his column for that day, this game is played with four blocks each having faces colored red, white, green and blue. The whole point of the game is to arrange these blocks in a row so that no two consecutive sides show the same color (and as well.) Sounds easy? Not when you consider that a cube has six sides, each of which has to be considered. I saw this game in a store the other day and thought our interested readers might want to know where they can buy one. Each set of blocks is 98 cents.

in my oblumn. It has occurred to me individual families could provide group therapy on a small scale for any member of the family who is trying to lose weight. This would be a very rewarding warm sort of group therapy.

Don't teuse reducers' about their dicting attempts or discourage them with such remarks as, "You might as well enjoy yourself. I can't see any difference." The person who says that is likely to be overweight himself or herself.

Encourage the reducer. Let her know you are in there cheering for her, and she will feel free to discuss her reducing problems with you. Do not make things harder by bringing home candy or high-calorie itsms. If you do, keep them out of the reducer's sight. Tell her how proud you are when she loses those first few pounds. A few looing little bribes wouldn't hurt either? Once the reducer senses your real concern and enthusiasm about her project, she will react just as someone.

For generations the countal farms of England and France depended to a great supply of humas and plant food, Gardeners in Victoria recessionally become occasionally become mility interested in this natural product and this weekend they will have the chance to do a little experimenting.

Students in Mount View High School are conducting a seaweed barvesting drive to help finance band activities. Home gardeners can Jack have sack loads of segureed delivered by phoning 473-3119 or 473-4537, and can assist the band members by making a doubtion to the fund raising drive.

Sourced contains more trate elements and minerals than any manufactured fer-stocked beside it to lose some of its moisture

In small quantities it may also be applied directly to bods and borders without a period

The actual human content is quite small compared to the bulk of fresh seaseed, so for experimental purposes it is wise to confine the application to a small area in order to obtain noticeable benefits.

Seaweed is an excellent mulch for the

How does an airport use radar?

A visit to an airport is as exciting as a circus. You watch a plane take off and before it is lost in the wide blue sky, another is ready to land. The pilots seem to know just where and when so go and this is because they can depend on the strport's radar system to guide them asales to and for expert operator able to think fast and keep his mind on the job. Visitors are not allowed because they would disturb these experts. The radar screens show just where all the anes are for miles around the rport. Planes fly fast and the traffic picture changes. Opera-tors must keep up with this changing scene and also know the whereabouts of all the plants and vacant runways on the ground. The pilots do not have all this information and they depend on traffic instruc-tions from the control tower.

The control tower has a who bis own territory, but Cameron decided to take action. There was a barrier at Sale River, so he rode there with his tritle in a horse-drawn carriage, with their baggage in another carriage following, When Cameron arrived at the harrier, which was guarded by a group of armed Metis, he stood up in his corriage, put his monocle in an eye, and roared "Remove that hissted fence." system of radar equipment that works together with radio and like an echo.

eron's horse and carriage around, and led them back to the frontier. McDougall was farced to wait there until Dec. I when he was recalled to Ottawa by Sir John A. Machanald who postporned taking over the territory until order had been restored. McDougall never got back.

Other events on Oct. 31:

1885—LaSalle begun exploring the Mississistic. The signal is a bright spot called a blip. As an eagle-eyed operator watches his screen, he sees a needle-shaped indicator sweep around and around. As it sweeps, it may show one or several blips. Each blip represents an airplane and the operator must be able to read just where it is. These fast-moving radar signals give the moving radar signals give the control room a complete picture

The opera-ture plan a safe course for each plane and send the instructions to the pilot. Radar works in darkness and its bright blips pierce the clouds. "We don't know much about mental force. If thought is coorgy and energy is indestructible, a person may be able to project thought—give it form, even knock over bottlies."

This may, he suggests, help account for the frequently reported activities of ghosts and pollergeists and "flings that go bump in the night—or daning the day."

He says the power of the EDMONTON (CP) — A present teum is looking for exhibiton that society pushes delinquent teen-agers into further delinquency.

The University of Alberta teum, headed by Dr. Seth Plainer, associate professor of sociality, is conflucting an 15-month study of 110 high school studients who have been wards. ients who have been wa of the court. Through old report cards and teacher records, their behavior before they became delinquent will he compared with their subse-quent history and with the reformance of a group of 300 indents who have had no ouble with the law.

We think that once society rands you as a deviant, it ends to estrucize you from seventional groups and forces you to associate with other delinquents," Dr. Fisher

"Our presumption is that udents who are labelled delinquent do more poorly in school and have less chance of graduating than those who are not labelled."

Metis Laughter Met Ottawa's Picked Man

By BOB BOWMAN

For a number of years after the Red River sprising of 1889 the Metiz (and probably others) had a favorite johe. They would pretend to put a monocle in one eye and say "remove that blasted fence."

The incident that caused the hilarity happened Oct. 31, 1863. Father of Confederation William McDougall was appointed to be the first lieutenant-governor of the Northwest Territories when Canada took over from the Hadson's Bay Company Dec.
